Q. Section 3.3.2 under "Installation and Upgrade" states: "Describe potential licensing options (by CPU, CPU-Type, Named User, Concurrent, etc.), including the impact of desktop and laptop installations for a single user working from alternate locations." Can you please explain what you mean by "impact of desktop and laptop installations for a single user working from alternate locations"?

A. Some software vendors allow a single license to be installed on both an individual's primary workstation (for use in the office) and ALSO on another machine (laptop) so that the individual can work offsite as needed (evenings, weekends, responding to after-hours incidents remotely). Do your licensing rules allow this dual installation, or would two separate licenses be required?
